Toy Bin Labels

Cut & tape · Ages 2-8

One label per bin: a picture on top, the word underneath. Cut along the dashed lines and tape each one at the height your child looks from. Every label gets a matching colored band on the front of its bin — the band says where the bin goes back.

How the three systems fit together

Ages 2-3: the picture plus one color band across the front of the bin, the same color on the shelf spot it belongs to. A band does not name anything; it says where the bin goes back, which is the question at the end of play. Never give two bins the same color.

Ages 4-6: rule a grid over the print so each piece sits in its own square, and let your child draw a second card for the same bin. The drawing works because they made it — do not redraw it yourself.

Ages 7+: add one word in capitals beside the picture, both at the same height, and put a card on the shelf edge as well. Bins get swapped and stacked; the shelf edge stays where it is.

Adult: an adult trims the prints and cuts the shapes — the scissors stay with you. A heavy bin lid is lifted clear, held, and set down flat before a child reaches in. Pieces out of the frame do not go back in.
